Boy Slayer Arraigned In Maine

By ARTHUR J. QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

SOUTH PARIS, Me., Oct. 18—Chalky-faced Paul N. Dwyer, 18-year-old confessed "ghoul" slayer, today declared that the killing of his neighbors, Dr. and Mrs. James G. Littlefield, was strictly a case of murder for profit.

"LIED ABOUT GIRL"

The slender youth, who in a four hour confession, said he had lied when he told New investigators he murdered the 65-year-old physician because he wanted a girl friend to go with.

Dwyer wrote the new confession on a pad of yellow paper while awaiting the formal arraignment against which he pleaded [illegible] Littlefield in a murderous assault last Wednesday night.

The wife and mother of Mrs. Littlefield, he said, was next and parcel of a fiendish robbery plan he had concocted several days before the double crime was committed.

INDIGNATION FLARES

When a police stenographer continued to force against the lad Dwyer said:

"I planned it so I could rob them. The motive was robbery. The girl did not enter into it."

The youth's brief outline of events leading to the 2:30 A. M. automobile trip with the bodies of his victims coincided plawati at Narragansett by the veteran Tom Thorp and his acceptance of the same post for the three-week special meet beginning today at Rockingham Park.

Day's Race Program Cancelled; Plan Card Tomorrow

Professing to see the handwriting on the wall, no stable owner, with the exception of O'Hara's own, carrying eight steeds in Arabo barns, moved out of Rockingham at the close of the regular fall meet Saturday.

Matt Law at Narragansett, of Foaks at the New Hampshire track said promises to bring at least another $4,000,000 to the New Hampshire plant.

Shortly after O'Hara had announced suspension of the first day's racing at Narragansett, Governor Quinn posed for newsreel men in Providence and when asked to say something for the soundtrack, declared:

"NOTHING PERSONAL"

"This is not a fight against the Narragansett Racing Association. There is nothing personal in this fight. It is a fight between O'Hara and the decent people of this state.

"There is no room for him in Rhode Island."

Governor Quinn added that he will not make a personal appearance at the track unless requested to do so by Adjutant-General Herbert R. Dean, who, the governor said, has been placed in complete charge.

At the same time, O'Hara, in a militant mood, announced that the third race for today had been named "Razzle Dazzle" for Governor Quinn and the first race, "Surprise," for Lieutenant-Governor Jordan.

Flags, except Rhode Island State flags, were on the poles in regular position today. Asked why State flags had not been raised, O'Hara said:

"They are greased poles, so we couldn't raise the flags."

In a somber mood, O'Hara claimed that last year would be out of work in the track except for about a total of $40,000 which he lost in cities and towns through cancellation of the current meet.

Not long after the first day's racing had been announced as cancelled, Attorney Hull, O'Hara's counsel, left the Biltmore hotel here and headed for Providence to confer with Senator Bulkley and the Administration leaders.

At 4 P. M. Hull presented to Narragansett Racing Association counsel what he called a ruling and the track was told it must place the matter in the hands of the military and abandon all the betting field.

A short time later the executive committee was polled.

It was thought that O'Hara might appeal to the United States courts to protect his property against the unlawful seizure and in a final decision effort to reopen the track.

GOVERNOR ADAMANT

O'Hara, who spent most of the night at his Tarantel penthouse conferring with his legal battery, may ask the State Supreme Court or State Superior Court to order Quinn to remove his army.

The Governor, however, it was declared, is adamant in his intention to win the latest and most sensational skirmish in his long politico-racing feud with O'Hara at all cost—including sacrifice of his own power.

Even as Governor Quinn stood firm behind his proclamation declaring a one-mile square area about the $3,000,000 Pawtucket plant in "a state of insurrection" and placing it under martial law, a state legislator threatened an impeachment move against Quinn.

The Governor ridiculed threats by Majority Leader Harry F. Curvin of the State House of Representatives to bring immediate impeachment proceedings against him.

Pointing out that only he can summon the legislature for any purpose, the chief executive with grim irony asserted:

"Take three guesses what I will do!"

With the meeting post time set for 1:15 this afternoon, possible trouble had been expected today from two sources.

The first was the possibility that Pawtucket police, under the control of Mayor Tom McGovern, any of the racing mogul, might attempt to forcibly open the track.

A second potential source of trouble was that the huge crowd of race fans who have come here for the day diverted might attempt to storm the track to gain admittance.

Quinn had based his martial law proclamation on the assertion that gangsters and other undesirable characters attending the meeting made it unsafe for honest citizens.

PICKET DETAILS

Most of the troops which arrived yesterday morning spent the night in Providence armories, leaving only small picket details at the scene of action.

However, early today they returned to here after heavy carried the soldiers garbed as for war, to the park.

The men carried bayoneted rifles, unloaded, and had with them rounds of ammunition, tear gas bombs, machine guns and other armaments.

Most of them were stationed along Newport road and a large detail on Manton street official entrance for those with passes.

Newport road is the key highway to the track and by blocking it, Col. Webster effectively prevents any ingress to the park. Thus, although the order to guard the mile-square Quinn boundaries other provided measures for an entrance to be observed at the entrances.

Meanwhile, Manager Kapstein and the headquarters remained in the racing. Officials attached to the track said that the meeting had been inoperative in all respects save.

The situation pressed a call from the Rev. H. Mann Brown of the First Presbyterian Church, in defiance of the governor's proclamation, he inferred the officers from his property, insisting they had no right to quash him.

Adjutant-General Dean, however, informed the irate racing man that the troops were under orders from Governor Quinn and that even if they would be compelled to dig ditches in the park, set up tents and take care

Armed forces of the state of Rhode Island were still in command at Narragansett Park today. They seized the track early Sunday. Here is one of the thoroughbreds and Franklin Wells, of the 243d Coast Artillery, one of the men detailed to protect stables during the track war.

Early this morning at Narragansett Park the 243d Coast Artillery contingent arrived for day guard duts, relieving a night detachment. Large trucks in background were used to take men from Providence armories to the scene of the war between Governor Quinn of Rhode Island and Walter E. O'Hara.

Supreme Court Upholds Wire Seizures

Black Joins in Ruling On Acts of Senate Group He Headed

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (AP)—With Justice Hugo L. Black sitting in refuge for the first time, the Supreme Court today denied petitions for review in cases involving the constitutionality of federal seizure of telegraph messages by the Interstate Commerce Commission as alleged.

Because Justice Black was chairman of a senatorial investigating committee which disclosed the seizure of messages, his participation was unexpected.

The action today was announced by court attaches, but the name of the petitioner that has sought to obtain a review by a petition for rehearing.

The case before the court was the petition of Bruce A. Ryan, of Texas, to review the Federal Communications Commission's order ordering him to show cause why his license should not be revoked.

RYAN'S "INTEREST"

Some lawyers say Ryan would have the personal interest necessary to test the constitutional right to his case.

They contended the order, in that direct disregard of the constitutional immunity from unreasonable search and seizure, violated the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies' constitutional rights against unreasonable search and seizure.

A federal district court refused to issue an injunction and the Fifth Circuit Court.

The Supreme Court's decision today means that the case will be heard and argued before the full court.

The right to review a case, and this case is the first of its kind to reach the court, is granted by section [illegible] of the Communications Act of 1934.

The fact was admitted for purposes of decision in the proceedings in Zimmerman vs. Wilson and in Hearst vs. Black, contrasting sharply with those involved herein, patently explain the different result reached by those cases as to proprietary of the searches there in question," said Solicitor General Stanley Reed in the government brief.

In the case of Walter Duranty, Moscow correspondent of The New York Times, the circuit court of appeals in Washington refused to review the decision of the lower court.

NO DECISION MADE

Asserting that this opinion was not involved, the government's brief in the Duranty case said that the decision of the lower court was in accord with the decisions of the Supreme Court in the cases of Near vs. Minnesota and Grosjean vs. American Press Co.

In the Hearst case, the government contended, the validity of the statutes in question were easily upheld under the police power and that it did not constitute unreasonable search.

The Supreme Court also refused to review a decision of the New York court which held that Hearst was entitled to a transcript of evidence and minutes of testimony.

Lawrence Hanfgarn appealed from a decision of the New York Supreme Court in a suit against George Mark. He contended that he deprived him of constitutional rights.

The high court dismissing the appeal, merely stated that no federal constitutional question was involved.

Joan Bennett Waits Thrill Of New Stage 'Experiment'

'I'll Have To Learn All Over'

Picture Star Opens In "Stage Door" Here Tonight

By ANN MARSTERS

When a movie star turns stage actress it's an event in her life which makes her just as excited and scary as a debutante at her first ball. It is, really, a daring experiment, and no one, least of all the movie star, can predict just how it will turn out.

Joan Bennett arrived in town yesterday to play the lead in Stage Door, which opens this evening at the Shubert theater. Of course, Joan is not a stranger to the stage, having been brought up in its atmosphere and having begun her career on the boards.

But Joan pointed out, "I haven't appeared on the stage for nine years—and whatever stage technique I once learned has been swamped completely by my movie work. I've had to learn how to act for the stage all over again—and frankly, I'm scared to death."

TALKS OF 'EXPERIMENT'

Miss Bennett was talking in the Ritz Carlton. She was dressed in a tailored suit of brown and said blue, with a jacket of navy Scotch tweed. The note of blue was carried out in the star sapphire she wore—set in gold in a clip at her throat, and a string of star sapphires which was wound around her wrist.

She talked mainly about the "experiment" of movie people appearing on stage first.

"There's hardly a star in Hollywood," she said, "who doesn't yearn to try the stage. That's not only because they want stimulation of playing before a real audience. It's because you are completely on your own in a stage play. It gives you a chance to make your own interpretation of the character you're portraying.

"But when you're making a picture, you are under the constant direction and supervision of the director. You must do just as he says. Every gesture, every tone of your voice must pass his approval—whether you like it or not.

"There's such a tremendous difference in that, and in what I'm doing now. And it's so glorious (and frightening) to be able to feel that I'm depending on my self alone—that I'm being an actress instead of a puppet."

TWO WEEKS REHEARSAL

Joan has had only two weeks of rehearsing for Stage Door. And she has been directed in her serious interpretation of the girl Terry, who, in the play, goes through struggles and heartaches to become a real actress in spite of Hollywood.

Miss Bennett feels that any movie star has a glorious chance to bring her fans when he or she attempts a stage part.

"Of course," she said, "if the play is a hit, it adds greatly to the prestige of the star and that's why the movie producers like to have their stars in a successful play. On the other hand, if the play is a flop, the star's stock goes definitely down in Hollywood. So it IS a risky experiment for any movie player to go into a new and untried play."

In her case, Joan does not have no fears of Stage Door, since it is an already established hit. She didn't see the play in Margaret Sullavan was its leading lady and exactly.

"GLAD I DIDN'T SEE IT"

"I'm glad I didn't see it," she said. "Sullavan's acting might have discouraged me—or I might, subconsciously, have tried to copy it."

Joan Bennett's appearance in the play is limited, for in January she must return to Hollywood to do another picture for Walter Wanger.

She hasn't, in case you're wondering, any intention of giving up Hollywood for the stage. Like so many movie people, she believes that the ideal arrangement is "to combine Hollywood and the theater.

Joan Bennett, film star, youngest of the three famous Bennett sisters, who will open in Stage Door at the Shubert Theater tonight, poses with her pet dog at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. "I'm scared to death," she told Ann Marsters, Boston Evening American writer, because you see, I'll have to learn my stage technique all over again."

Woman Admits Mutilating Widower

Rich N. Y. Yachtsman Near Death After Attack on Boat

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (INS)—Mutilation of Wilbur E. Johnson, 54-year-old executive of an advertising firm, was reported to have been admitted today by a comely Long Island matron, who insisted she inflicted the wounds in a frantic "resistance" to an improper proposal.

After thirty hours of almost constant grilling, Mrs. Lita Dorothy Hamlyn, red haired and 40, finally told investigators that the episode occurred a drinking party aboard Johnson's motor yacht at anchor off Long Beach, Nassau County authorities said.

As investigators took down her amazing story, Johnson, a wealthy clubman, lay near death in his home at Freeport.

Suffering excruciating pain from his injuries, weakened by loss of blood, he was given only a 50-50 chance to live.

UNDER NO CHARGES

After hearing her statement the matron was permitted to return to her home. No charge was lodged against her.

Although at first intimating that the case probably would not be prosecuted, police authorities today announced a grand jury probe would be started with Mrs. Hamlyn as the most important witness.

According to Nassau District Attorney Meade Esposito, Mrs. Hamlyn admitted custody of the knife.

"He made improper proposals. He tried to force me into doing something I wouldn't do. I tried to stop him."

'Stay Away From War!' Cry Legislators of 40 States

Cardinal Questions Draw Vigorous Warnings

Senators and representatives from 40 states have sent back a thunderous and reassuring "NO" in answering seven questions from the Boston Evening American on whether the nation should allow itself to become embroiled in foreign wars.

From Atlantic to Pacific, from Canada to the Gulf, the men who directly represent the people in Congress have voiced a strong determination for today, tomorrow and forever to keep the United States out of war.

Treaty obligations such as that require consultation of the other City of Canada, signed in Washington part of 1922, should be observed, some of the Senators and Representatives urge. Some of the same breasts they point out whatever the decision at such conferences may be, the United States cannot be compelled by treaty to go to war, enforce a collective decision.

Among the many national Senate leaders in Division of Nevada, Democrat; Borah of Idaho, Republican; Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri, Democrat; Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, Republican, and Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota, Republican, have given strong expressions against participation in foreign wars.

MORE OPINIONS

Today the opinions of additional Senators and Representatives are given.

"Despite the continuous propaganda disseminated by idealists and internationalists who have commercial and financial reasons to place this country in the League of Nations, the people of this country have consistently expressed their opposition to any pact or association with entangling alliances with foreign powers to drag us into any war not in defense of our own country or national honor," Senator Richard B. Russell, Jr., of Georgia, replies.

"The neutrality policy of our country as established by tradition and specifically expressed by statutory enactment forbids report to force or to hostile acts against any country in combination with foreign powers or the so-called league of nations.

"Our neutrality policy should seek to quarantine the United States against war rather than constitute our government a judge to determine aggressors or a policeman to enforce peace in foreign fields. Our policy does not contemplate any active cooperation with the league of nations or foreign powers looking to this end."

PROBLEMS AT HOME

"We have too many pressing problems at home, vitally affecting the welfare and happiness of our own people to engage in Knight errantry all over the world and I do not believe the American people will countenance any action which is likely to involve us in European or Asiatic wars.

"Recent events lead to believe to the view that it might be best to change the Constitution so as to provide for a referendum vote of the people before participating in any foreign war."

with beliefs held by local authorities and townsfolk in South Paris and neighboring Norway.

COURTROOM CROWDED

The new confession was revealed while Dwyer was being arraigned before Municipal Judge Harry Shaw in a crowded Norway courtroom a few minutes before noon today.

The proceedings lasted but two minutes. After the complaint was read, charging him with assaulting and murdering the physician, Dwyer was asked how he wanted to plead.

In a loud, sharp voice, he said:

"Not guilty."

RETURNED TO JAIL

A moment later, while muttering comments audible in the hall outside the court, he was placed in an automobile and returned to the county jail here.

The brief arraignment took place in the tomblike silence of more than 50 men and women who had crowded into the drab, 20-by-40-foot courtroom.

The harsh appearance of Dwyer, who was dressed in plaid jacket, brought a wide frown of astonishment from many in the crowd.

One young girl whispered to a companion:

"Why, he's only a kid. Isn't it a shame?"

Dwyer was accompanied by E. Stanley Heselton, Lewiston attorney, who was appointed as defense counsel yesterday. Attorney Heselton said that he had been approached by two other lawyers in the Maine capital city but had finally refused to act.

Dwyer will be arraigned in Portland on Mrs. Littlefield's murder charge, it was learned today. Portland is midway between Portland and South Paris and Friday morning.

Soviet to Direct Tenancy in Cities

MOSCOW, Oct. 18 (AP)—The Soviet today took another step toward putting dwellers of the cities of Russia on a basis of government ownership.

The decree provides that the tenancy of apartments, which was transferable to heirs, will be administered by local Soviets. Owners of apartment houses will no longer receive rentals from some of their tenants, but will receive only such amounts as the Soviets may allot them.

Under Soviet law, the ownership of land is vested in the state. There had been considerable agitation that the government should take over the tenancy arrangements to make possible an increase in rentals, as owners had been receiving only a small fraction of the amounts paid by tenants who were permitted to remain indefinitely.

Whether the transfer of apartments will be followed by a general increase in rentals remains to be seen.

Soviet Vetters, Soviet commissariat of trade, was replaced by a ministry of trade, and M. P. Smirnoff was chosen by the central executive committee to succeed him.

Vetter, eighth member of the Soviet Union Council of People's Commissars removed in the past two years, recently had been attacked for his administration of trade.

Whether the transfer of Vetter's powers will affect the commissariat of foreign trade was not known for certain, but it was believed that the latter would continue to function.

There had been considerable speculation that the foreign trade commissariat would be merged with the ministry of trade, but it was announced that the former would remain independent.

Vetter, who was removed from his post in the midst of a purge which followed the assassination of Sergei M. Kirov, was reported by a Moscow newspaper to have been appointed director of the Kuibyshev Machine Building Plant in White Russia.

Years ago the president of a high school in Western town, and an old acquaintance of that time ran into the following fellow. He knew about what he was prepared to do, and asked of him:

"What calling do you plan to follow when you go out? In the world on your own?"

Our fellow thought for this question over a moment, as he was always one to consider things before he had to, and then he came back with:

"I think I'd like to be a business man of some kind," he said at last right, said the principal. "That is fine. You may make a success of some business. But I understand your parents want you to go to college after you get through high school. Don't go to college. You will acquire all the education you can possibly assimilate right here in high school, and it will be enough to suit your purpose."

"I have studied your case thoroughly, the principal continued. "I am very fond of you, and that is why I am giving you this advice. You are too much of a numskull to profit from college. You have not the mental capacity, the application, nor any other attribute to justify you going to college."

Brookline Debs Plan Barn Dance On Mrs. Whipple Fry's Estate

By BETTY ALDEN

"TEAR OFF the other half of this convenient business reply card and mail it to us, return postage guaranteed" . . . A group of Brookline debutantes have read these familiar words on so many direct mail advertisements and trial offer postcards, that it occurred to them to apply the methods of modern business to one of their parties . . .

ELISABETH HOVEY

It is always a problem to know exactly how many of those invited will actually arrive at the door on the evening of the party . . . so Louise Fry and her Brookline sister debs who are giving a barn dance on Thursday evening, October 28, have dispensed with the usual formal invitations with the dignified, but often ineffective, R. S. V. P. . . . and have sent out double postcards . . . one bearing the invitation and the other a regular pre-paid business reply card which can be torn off and returned to the sender.

On this reply card the prospective guest need only write his name and check one of two blank spaces indicating whether "I can come" or "I cannot come" . . .

Those who place their check mark in the first box will arrive at the barn on Mrs. Whipple Fry's Warren street estate, to be greeted by all sorts of grinning jack o'lanterns, hobgoblins and witches, for the girls in charge have decided to rush the Halloween season by a couple of days . . .

Originators of this silly party are Louise Fry, Jean Clark, Jean Stowell Gillen, Constance Hoyt, Nancy Newell, Nancy Nye, Ellanor Petry, Patricia Phelan, Lucy Pope, Virginia Prout and Sylvia Van Ness . . . Supper will be served in the barn at seven o'clock and there will be dancing 'til one A. M. . . .

The Brookline debs who are away at college, including Beth Muir and Marie Haffenreffer, will give a similar party in Mrs. Fry's barn during the Christmas holidays . . .

Louise Fry will make her formal debut at a tea dance at her mother's home on Thursday afternoon, November 11 . . .

At a very delightful Sunday afternoon reception, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Jackson of Chestnut Hill presented their daughter, Katharine M. Jackson, to society yesterday.

The Jackson home was decorated with a profusion of autumn sentiments, and white chrysanthemums and other flowers and green was the color scheme chosen by Mrs. Jackson and her daughter for their guests.

Mrs. Jackson received in a gown of deep green velvet with which was worn a corsage of pale green orchids. Miss Jackson was attired in a gown of pale green satin combined with a deeper shade of velvet and wore a corsage of yellow orchids.

Mrs. Arthur Cotton, a daughter of the hostess, was in charge of the guest book, which was placed on the mantelpiece under a floral arrangement of white chrysanthemums, flanked by tall green candles. Pleasant Dolan, Marjorie Lee Tarbell, Mary Dolan and Mary Cotton, granddaughters of the hostess, were ushers.

Mrs. Jackson's daughters, Mrs. Alden Manley, Mrs. Ogden Mills and Mrs. Richard Newton Perkins, were present, as were her sons, Mr. Charles Jackson and Mr. Francis Jackson.

Mrs. Jackson's mother, Mrs. Edward Motley Pickman, was the guest of honor today at a tea given by Mrs. Arthur Adams at her home on Beacon street.

A group of Mrs. Jackson's friends gave a dinner party at the Somerset Club last evening in honor of the bride-elect. Mrs. Jackson's daughters, Mrs. Alden Manley, Mrs. Ogden Mills and Mrs. Richard Newton Perkins, were the guests of honor today at a luncheon given by Mrs. Alden Manley at her home on Bay State road. Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge was the guest of honor today at a luncheon given by Mrs. Ogden Mills at her home on Bay State road.

When Women Take Places on Juries

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DOES a woman, whose love tangles have to be submitted to the judgment of a court, prefer that her case be considered by men only?

Or does she feel that she would receive fairer and more sympathetic treatment if other women had a say in the matter?

When New York's first woman judge, Mrs. Ann Partin, was told the other day that she had been selected she smiled and said that since they were going to make it unanimous she was glad that she had just had her hair waved.

That, of course, was a joke, [illegible] there was good sense behind it.

FAIR MINDED

A certain appreciation doesn't happen good judgment, and just the waved hair is by no means a mere matter of vanity alone.

What is far more important [illegible] fair mind and a warm heart [illegible] I know, to summon the stupid prejudices that have so long existed.

We women should have an opportunity to be represented through the jury system.

[illegible] Women have been [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Self-Made Girl

By Hazel Livingstone

CHAPTER 81

"COME and sit with me a while," a woman suggested after breakfast, and Linda followed her through her own car, into a drawing room in the one ahead.

"I hate traveling alone—I never did before. But since Dr. Ross passed away—" The woman, Mrs. Ross, got out a large white handkerchief, and looked steadily out of the window for a little while before going on. "I've been alone.

"So now I'm going to San Francisco to visit my son and then I'm going on to Santa Barbara, to a winter resort, to stay with her, Mrs. Mildred Chase, and see her baby.

"I think I have a picture of her in my bag. She's such a sweet baby. Kathryn Ross thought she looked like her father, she took one look and—I don't know, I'm not sure—but she thought I knew. I could see that. I could be indifferent to the thing that mattered, to the thing that made the ravaged face of the middle-aged dowager, and had to admit they were alike.

Never was there such a capable woman, such an intelligent woman, such an unhappy woman, so friendly as this pleasant, expensively clad widow of the late Dr. Karl Ross, who had made millions in the auto industry, and gave millions to science.

A LONELY WIDOW

Tact and intuition solved his death only a few weeks before she had been unable to bring herself to close her long locked house and go to any of her married children.

"It's too much like admitting the end of things," she said, "and that's what it is, I suppose. Now, that's the difference between us. You have your life ahead, and mine is finished, though I've got to go on living—and in a way I still want to live.

"So I wrote Sara—that's my eldest daughter—Mrs. Milton Van Week, in Pittsburgh, that I'd come to her for a little while later, and I'd spend a while with Katherine in Santa Barbara, and as I said, I'm stopping off in San Francisco to see Horace, my son.

"They want me to stay with them—his wife, Emilie—she was a Wilton—is such a sweet girl, but you know a daughter-in-law is never like your own, and so I said no, absolutely no. I'd stay at a hotel. No one can say I'm an interfering mother-in-law."

"What did you say you were going to do in San Francisco, Miss Ferry?" Mrs. Ross wondered.

"I—why, nothing, I suppose, now. "I'm going advertising, I guess. I'm going to look for a position. I don't know just what—secretarial perhaps."

"To LOOK for a position! All this way? Didn't you say you were from New York?"

"I've lived there for four or five years, but I lived in the country before that—in Rosefield, near Philadelphia, you know."

"I'm . . . Rosefield. Sara had a friend . . . let me see . . . Crighton—Florence Crighton. Did you know the Crightons?"

"Not very well. Florence was older than I. Do your know the Scotts? Constance was one of my best friends. We went to school together."

FAMILY HISTORY

"I'm . . . let me see—Scott. Have a chocolate. I attempt, but you're thin, and at my age it doesn't matter what—Scott. Didn't she marry one of the Winships?" What? Oh, you mean the GRANDDAUGHTER. Of course it was Miriam Rowan I meant. She married old Senator Scott's son. Clyde (and divorced him—they say he drank terribly, though I did hear that it was on account of the way she carried on, though you can't believe everything you hear. The Scotts'

"My dear—the doctor knew the old senator well!"

"I used to know him, too. When I was a little girl. Mr. Scott—his son, I mean—gave me a letter to Senator Arnold in San Francisco. He thought—

"Senator ARNOLD? Julius Arnold? Why, I mailed—Arnold's wife is an Arnold—on her mother's side. The senator is her great-uncle. What a small world! —Well—really!"

Fired with chocolates, regard with family gossip, Linda settled back on the extra pillow the porter brought, and closed her eyes. It was a long, exciting day.

AN IMPOSTER

There was the mistaking Mrs. Ross' genuine liking for her before they reached Chicago, she was calling her Linda, and promising so much that Linda was getting frightened.

And never before was she to make the grade—would be discovered as an imposter . . .

But was she an imposter? Her mother had been a Rosefield girl, and even confessed how nine years she had, and how proud she was of her daughter.

"You must stay with me for a few days," Mrs. Ross insisted. "I'm going to the San Francisco because I've always gone there, and I've just been dreading it, because this is the first time I've been without—without Dr. Ross—Oh you must, Linda! As my guest. Only I'll be in your debt, because you don't know how much I dreaded going alone — how I dreaded this trip. Now, please! You can't say no. It's all settled."

It was settled—as simply as that.

"Tomorrow," Mrs. Ross promised, over the supper that was being served in their own sitting room, "I'll call Horace—he'll be so MAD that I didn't let him know so that he could meet me, and rush me off my feet—and I'll get that all settled.

"And then, later on in the day we'll go out and see the Senator, and get that job for you."

"If he has a job."

"If he hasn't he'll have to make one," said Mrs. Ross.

Linda ate, awake and thoughtful all over again, after Mrs. Ross, who was soon beyond was audibly asleep.

She seemed to have all the luck, good and bad. For years nothing happened, and then everything happened.

She went to New York, and walked into Tamara, and then good luck—that is, Mrs. Ross—and walked into Mrs. Ross.

In the morning Mrs. Ross was up early, padding around in exclamations and Emilie finished being breakfast sent up threatening to telephone for her, Horace, and finally got it off.

"I ordered hot-cakes and little sausages for you, Lynn dear—is that all right? I'm just having a double orange juice and my coffee . . . oh I might just TASTE a cake—I told them service for two—oh what WILL Horace say to me? And Lynn, you must stand by me, and don't let them talk me into going out there—because I simply won't."

Over her third cup of coffee she gathered courage to telephone, and there was a long, long conversation, with Horace talking and then daughter-in-law Emilie and then Horace—and presently, in both arrived, still scolding, still fussing dear Mamma that she must come right out to the house—

AN INVITATION

"You must come, too, Miss Ferry," Horace urged, and his wife echoed, less heartily, "Yes indeed."

"We'll come for dinner then—if you're not having a crowd. I'm really not up to a crowd yet." Mrs. Ross promised, holding her son's hand, looking at him adoringly, forgetting all about Emilie.

After more gayety Lynn had taken to another long drive . . .

Emilie was also young, Linda thought as she looked and saw the three women together, and felt sorry for a moment for Horace, who had married a girl who was so much younger than he was, and who was so much younger than his mother, and Mrs. Ross had had no children, and Emilie had had no one to help her, and she had had to do it all herself.

Three years passed and Linda had come to be one of senator Arnold's many amazing discoveries, a perfectly marvelous person.

Five o'clock, and Mrs. Ross came to life and exclaimed for a cup of tea, and Linda put her head on it at its best angle and climbed into her comfortable bottle for the senators.

Secret of Hollywood Make-up Is Magic Base

By ARLINE GOULD

IT'S ALL ILLUSION—the dew-touched, gossamer-and-moonlight fragility of eternally young skin that holds the adoring gaze of star-gazing millions.

It's illusion that rises like a dream of beauty from a squat little white jar with a thick gold cover.

Ever since Hollywood nurtured the baby movie industry, in all those long years when incalculable sums of money have been spent on research and compounding the make-up film which is the stars second skin—her mask of chiffon through which she looks—desirable, appealing, elusively glamorous.

Tinted to use under the glare of powerful lights, it wouldn't do you much good. But it has been taken by the expert hands of men who have brushed every face in Hollywood with beauty — and adapted for you and me, tinted for our daytimes and our nights. The squat white jar with thick gold cover which holds it belongs on your dressing table, if you're ever going to get anywhere in your most personal, vital scheme of things.

HEARTBREAK OR HEARTBALM? Set No. 3—Human Problem No. 13

She was a working man's daughter.
The boy who loved her was the only son of a small New England state's richest and most prominent citizen, a multi-millionaire banker.
The girl's modest cottage home was just outside the high iron fence which surrounded the park like grounds of the mansion where her sweetheart lived.
He and she used to meet secretly, under the moon.
SET 3 Human Problems No. 13

The Rules in a Nutshell

- ★ The Editors of the Boston Evening American have written and illustrated 90 short stories that deal with HUMAN PROBLEMS.
- ★ One story will appear daily for 15 weeks. Each week six will appear. Each six represents a Set. There will be 15 Sets.
- ★ Each story has been written and illustrated so that you may with skill and judgment be able to find the correct conclusion.
- ★ Each story will have clues in the text or illustration that will point to the one correct conclusion. (Stories are taken from fiction, fable, history and the pages of this paper.)
- ★ The contest began October 4th, 1937, and ends January 22nd, 1938.
- ★ Anyone in New England may enter except employees of Hearst Newspapers and members of their families.
- ★ The One Hundred contestants who have most successfully selected the correct conclusions, thereby obtaining the highest grade, will be awarded in the order of their gradings a total of $20,000.00 in Cash. The first award will be $15,000.00 with 99 consolation awards listed on this page.
- ★ NEATNESS is not a factor in the judging of the answers.
- ★ Five judges have been appointed. They will have the original source from which each story was taken as proof of the ONE correct solution.
- ★ In case of ties only the tied contestants will submit an original problem in less than 200 words. This tie-breaking problem will be judged on its ORIGINALITY OF THOUGHT and its Human Quality. Neatness or grammatical construction does not count.
- ★ Every contestant will have an individual file. They will receive an acknowledgment card of their entry with their contest number.
- ★ THE SETS-OF-SIX are to be sent in EACH WEEK in a UNIT.
- ★ TEN CENTS must be sent with EACH SET-OF-SIX. This is required to be eligible for a prize. The contestant will receive in return an illustrated booklet containing 15 original Human Problems. The booklet will be mailed at the conclusion of the contest to the contestants who have completed the ninety problems.
- ★ The judges will have final decision, and by entering you agree to accept their decisions as final.
- ★ The Boston American will publish the correct conclusions following the awarding of the prizes and in case the contestants submit tie-breaking original problems, these will be published in the new department of the Boston American, to be called the HUMAN FORUM.

By

Robert E. Rogers

My attention has been drawn as politicians say to the recent remarks made by Carl W Ackerman, dean of the graduate school of journalism at Columbia, in an address he made while attending a meeting of managing editors of newspapers at New Orleans. According to the news reports he said

ROBERT E ROGERS

Radio will never supplant the newspaper as the nation's greatest educational force. The spoken word appeals more to the emotions, the written word more to reason. Moreover, one retains better what one reads than what one hears.

The newspaper is a great educational force because it gives factual information in its news presentation and interpretation of news on its editorial pages.

Criticism of Frivolity On Air Must Be Met

The recent arrangement by which the former president of Yale is giving expert educational services to one of the important major networks seems to be an indication that radio feels that the current criticism about the frivolity of radio has to be met somehow.

On the other hand I suspect that the American newspapers for [illegible] are doing a sufficient [illegible] educat[illegible] the shortage of news to have to fall back on expert educational advice.

As a matter of fact, if I have anything to say about it, the successful educational technique of the daily newspaper and the radio rests squarely on the basis of NEW things as well as important things.

Education is not news. It only furnishes the basis for the proper understanding of news. An ignorant person cannot read a newspaper really intelligently. He hasn't the background, that cluster of associations, of associated ideas, of "pictures in the head," which enrich and make vivid and meaningful what he reads in the daily press.

Still less, of course, can he weigh and assimilate a series of rapid news flashes, or even a rapid fifteen minute commentary on the news, which must necessarily be packed with meaning beyond what the average person can take in and digest for future reference.

The 'Eyes' Have It; Sight Impressions Last

But, admitting that, there can be no doubt that what is seen through the eyes, particularly if the reader has the chance to go back and re-read it, does last longer and become a more permanent part of one's mental furniture than what is heard once through the ears.

Our memories are not as good, probably, as our fathers' memories were. We remember catch phrases, startling details which we have heard over the air, but it is very difficult to follow an argument heard orally or remember all the details of a necessarily complicated exposition.

In that respect, I suspect that the newspaper has it all over the radio like a tent. I believe this will continue to be true while eyes are eyes and ears are ears. In other words, the physiological apparatus of man plays a very considerable part in any competent discussion of the question which Dean Ackerman raises.

Wife Finds New Way To Force Separation

Mrs Mary J. Atwood, of Brighton, whose husband refused to leave her home even after a legal separation has found a way to cope with the situation.

Mrs Atwood's attempt to secure a divorce from her second husband, a marine engineer, has been held up in Middlesex Probate Court while Judge John C Leggat considers the unusual case. Divorces are not supposed to be granted where the principals are living under the same roof.

Each have children by a previous marriage and difficulties of caring for the two broods, with consequent jealousies and in their separation and Mrs. Atwood.

Her husband insisted on staying at her house on Commonwealth avenue Brighton when he returned from trips, she says, to be near his children.

The next time he returns, however, he may find things different. Mrs. Atwood has taken his four children to the home of relatives in Waltham. With her own two daughters, she may now leave for a South Dakota Indian Reservation.

Mrs. Brennan Rites Planned

Funeral services for Mrs. Margaret J. Brennan, 81, mother of James H Brennan, former member of the governor's council, will be conducted in St Frances de Sales Church, Charlestown, on Wednesday at 10 a m.

Mrs. Brennan for 75 years a resident of Charlestown, and the widow of Thomas J Brennan, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs Ellen T Donovan, 282 Bunker Hill street, after a year's illness.

She is also survived by her sons, Attorney James H Brennan, Attorney John A Brennan, attached to the Social Security division of New England, and Bernard J. Brennan.

T. N. Perkins Estate Bequeathed to Widow

The widow of Thomas Nelson Perkins, distinguished Boston attorney, member of the Harvard Corporation and railroad director who died October 7, was made sole beneficiary, according to his will filed today in Dedham probate court.

The will provided that Mrs Perkins receive $25 000 outright, all houses and real estate and all articles of personal and domestic use.

Mrs Perkins also received the remainder of the estate in trust the income of which is to go to her during her lifetime On her death the principal is to be disposed of as she desires.

Three sons, Thomas V. Jr, James and Elliott were named executors and trustees. The will was drawn February 27, 1936.

No bond was filed to indicate the amount of the estate.

Architects Laud Design of U.S. Buildings

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP)—Architects generally expressed agreement today with President Roosevelt's assertion that the federal buildings erected during the last four or five years were an artistic improvement over the "terrible monstrosities" of another day.

They likewise concurred with the President when he said at the laying of the cornerstone of Poughkeepsie's new postoffice last week that the depression had enabled the government to obtain the services of many architects who might otherwise have been engaged in private practice.

"There is no question about the superiority of present-day design in government buildings," said Arthur L. Harmon, president of the New York chapter of the American Institute of Architects. The same is true throughout the country in private practice.

It must be so, for the government draws from the great reservoir of private initiative."

TALENT OBTAINED

Our government, particularly in the Treasury department, has met the problem during the depression—which we still have with us in the building industry—by leasing architects and their draftsmen from private employment," he said. They were able to get excellent talent because of the lack of employment in private practice.

It would be better for the architectural profession as a whole and therefore for the government if the government would join with the architects in evolving a method by which its buildings could be designed by architects in private practice.

The governments state federal and city are in danger of killing the architectural goose that has the golden egg of artistic excellence.

BACKS PRESIDENT

It is very true, he said "that in the last five years or so the architecture of government buildings has improved a great deal."

RHODY SPITE WAR KILLS GOLDEN TURF GOOSE

AUSTEN LAKE

Bedtime Story, or Narragansett Under Martial Law

WELL, KIDDIES, HELP YOURSELVES TO aspirin whilst papa gives you the latest brainstorm about the Wacky War twix Wilful Walter and Bumptious Bob for control of Rhode Island's betting funds. Cyril, quit snitching Papa's eating tobacco and shove the seltzer nearer sister's glass so you don't squirt fizz on her frock.

AUSTEN LAKE

Tonight papa is telling how Bumptious Bob hollered for his parade soldiers to surround Wilful Walter's Narragansett horse park and keep people from spending their wages on knee-knocks, stomach convulsions and feelings of fuzz in their throat. Of course, kiddies, neither Wilf nor Bump give a tinker's swear about the people in this matter, so much as they dearly desire to give each other the outstretched foot. Wilf didn't want Bump to be Governor of Rhode Island, though he gave some of his horse-plant's profits to the Democratic party — just in case Bump did get to be Gov., which he did. And Bump got sore at some things Wilf said and now he doesn't want Wilf to be boss of the gambling business

That's the synopsis, kiddies. You remember in the previous chapter how Wilful and Bumptious were yowling like a pair of moon-pussies about whether Wilf would take his name off his letter heads, and getting all the judges in Rhode Island out of bed to issue writs and restraints. And just when Bump thought he had a go-behind-toe-hold on Wilful, old Wilf gave a legal wiggle and put a headlock on Bump. The plot was pure plagiarism from Paul Bowser's wrestling operas with Pawtucket's comic cops huff-puffing around Wilf's penthouse and making passes at trespasser's brains, and Bump's beagles tearing around on motor cycles with warrants, summonses and supoenas.

Gene Driscoll Lauds All-America Bouts

Amateur Boxers Give Fans Much Action

By JACK CONWAY

GENE DRISCOLL, chairman of the boxing committee of the New England A. A. A. U., is of the opinion that the Hearst All-America amateur boxing tournament will be the greatest show of its kind ever held in New England.

The grand nationals, which will take place at the Garden on December 13, will find the class of the amon pure boxers from California to Maine battling for the high honors.

New England will make a strong bid for honors in each of the eight championship classes.

"Amateur boxing has made an amazing comeback in New England," said Gene Driscoll. "During the depression, most of the amateur boxing clubs closed. When things were darkest, the Irish American A. A. started staging shows at its quarters in South Boston. At first there were small crowds and slim entry lists.

"The bouts that were altered proved attractive, and the attendance picked up. Later there were more boxers. It was only a matter of a year when it was necessary for the Irish American A. A. to transfer their shows to the Arena where they could take care of the large crowds that were turning out each week.

"The Hearst All-America bouts a year ago then furnished amateur boxing the drive it needed. These bouts produced intense competition. It was a great tribute to boxing when more than 5000 persons were unable to gain admittance to the New England finals at the Arena.

"Salvatore Bartolo, Abe Denner, George Martin, Roy Kelley and Yancy Henry, who have scored recent successes in the ranks of the professionals, were graduates of the Hearst All-America shows."

Kennedy's Tax Views Important

Markets Should Perk Up on Hint of Reforms And Budget Balance

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

As we look back over the jumbled events of the past week there is one bit of news that the market practically ignored. And despite the fact it was sorely pressed by sellers it seems to us the implication of tax reforms and budget balancing to be found in the remarks of Joseph P. Kennedy, following a long visit with the President, deserved a much better reception.

Mr. Kennedy's relation to the administration and business circles is unique in that he is one of the few men enjoying the confidence of both. He has undertaken some difficult tasks for President Roosevelt and dispersed of them without incident. Diplomatic of business and financial leaders, while doing such a thorough job they would have critics were forced to be silent. Consequently when he remarks after his visit with the President intimate the administration might make some adjustment in onerous corporate tax laws and undistributed corporate earnings, saw the markets have a legitimate cause for cheer. And after he adds that it is a balanced budget that concerning the President most at this time and that there is a good chance it will be achieved next year, then security prices that for a moment or two on Tuesday of investment should perk up.

While some compilations showing the trend of business have failed to reverse the downtrend is evidence since mid-summer the one we follow, supplied weekly by the Administrative and Research Corporation, advanced for the second week in succession. As we pointed out last week, the turn came at approximately the same time as last year and enabled the figure to maintain a record of holding above that of a year ago. In view of this performance we are more convinced than ever that pessimism has been away overdone as regards the business picture as well as the markets.

The various component parts of th index also show up well. The steel ingot figure dropped as usual continued to draw on inventories but and freight loadings slipped. But automobile production, and bank debits outside of New York City climbed in heartening fashion, while commercial loans and cotton deliveries were up.

The boardrooms abounded with bearish talk this morning. Pride indeed were the operators as low prices for this issue and that were arbitrarily set by the gossips. But in hard-headed investment advisory circles such talk was not heard. There the talk was of buying. Such comments as, "the pessimism surrounding the general discussion of the current readjustment has reached the silly stage," and "a more widespread use of liquid capital is now warranted than at any time in two years." It is the latter we prefer to give attention to at this time. And we suggest that readers do likewise.

Another bit of informed opinion that we think worth passing along is that within a few points of last week's lows a turn will be negotiated that will be the forerunner of a rise of some 25 points in the Dow-Jones industrial average. Such things can hardly be parried as fact but they do supply an idea of how some important groups have moved from boardroom circles are looking at current market affairs.

Shows Picture Still Has Two Sides

Forbes Says Panicky-ness Does Not Seem Justified

By B. C. FORBES

America's upward economic movement has halted. That is indisputable.

Whether the current trend is merely sidewise or definitely downward is less certain.

What is certain is that there has been no such relapse in business as there has been in stocks.

In the first half of this month the decline on the New York Stock Exchange exceeded that for the whole of September, when the aggregate market value of all listed issues dropped $7,589,880,676. Bonds, too, have sunk to the lowest level of the year.

The violence of the downswing in securities lately has exceeded anything ever before experienced except during the October-November, 1929, collapse.

Sentiment, which the column recorded months ago was becoming apprehensive in the highest circles has steadily grown more pessimistic both in and out of Wall Street until today gloominess is the rule rather than the exception.

Politics are blamed most by men of affairs for having chilled recovery. The electioneering started shortly after President Roosevelt's spring pronouncement that in certain directions the pace had become too rapid.

Admitting that the forward movement has been checked, and that many unfavorable facts and factors could be cited, may be timely, in view of the unbridled bearishness in Wall Street and the widespread prevalence of business pessimism, to draw attention to other phases of our situation.

Results this year are, on the whole, substantially better than in the first three-quarters of last year. Railway freight has been running ahead of twelve months ago, although this is changing.

Electric output is enormously five per cent above last year.

Motor manufacturers report gratifying orders from dealers for new models.

Generous crops are assured. Farmers are paying off loans more rapidly than expected.

Employment, though now waning somewhat, still is ahead of last fall and the nation's weekly pay envelope is substantially thicker.

More telephones are being installed. More life insurance is being bought.

Labor troubles have become less acute, with public sentiment now uncompromisingly hostile to arbitrary sit-down strikes.

Foreign trade is running decidedly ahead of a year ago.

Money is abundant at abnormally low rates.

President Roosevelt's assault on the Supreme Court has been frustrated. Lawmakers have become less pliant to the will of the White House. Relief expenditures have been curtailed. The budget presumably is nearer to being balanced. Hope rises that various flagrant tax evils—notably, the corporation surplus tax and the capital gains tax—will be somewhat modified. Nor was it certain that congress will endorse drastic control of agriculture or of wages and hours.

Should President Roosevelt see wisdom in soft pedaling his combative attitude towards business in order to avert any hirch towards depression and worse unemployment, the whole outlook would change very quickly.

Panickyness does not seem justified.

Wall Street Now On Sidelines

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP)—A drastic decline in stocks and the call for a special session of Congress have left Wall Street waiting expectantly to see how the market quake registers on the political seismographs at Washington.

Analysts figure something like $17,000,000,000 in quoted values have been sheared from the stock exchange security lists since mid-August—the biggest shrinkage since the augmented SEC and federal credit controls began to function in 1934 and 1935.

In the swing down from the recovery heights, touched last March, the share market has yielded about 45 per cent of the ground gained on a preceding two-year advance, one of the most sustained bull trends in Wall Street history.

ALDRICH ADDRESS

Undercurrents of criticism in financial circles of federal regulatory swings on Wall Street and demand for modification rose to the surface last week in the Rochester address on the stock market of Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank.

At the same time other events helped swerve the money center's gaze toward Washington on the chance of action there designed to strengthen the market's defenses.

Among them was President Roosevelt's hint he may have something to say of interest to the market place presumably on taxation and financial regulations in forthcoming messages to Congress.

Along the trading fronts, the carefully prepared Aldrich presentation was widely acknowledged as the financial community's proposals for immediate corrective steps in Washington on complaints he set forth in detail.

Attracting most attention in some quarters was his charge the SEC had overstepped the bounds of its authority in formulating trading rules. He contended the restrictions parts had been responsible for aggravating the decline by depriving the market of informed support from speculators and on whom other groups would have been counted upon to take offsetting buying risks more freely.

Yet, from a realistic view, many Wall Streeters looked for his proposals on modification of capital gains taxes and stock market credit restrictions to make the deepest impression on Washington.

Clamor for revision of the capital gains tax—which makes speculative profits subject to income tax rates on a scale graduated according to the time a buyer holds his stock—has been an old story, dating back to the 1929 crash.

However, the known attitude on the capital gains tax of some influential voices in the administration has encouraged the financial district to hope for revision, possibly in the next regular session of Congress.

Advocates of change in the capital gains levy hold the effect would be to help iron out peaks and valleys in security price fluctuations by encouraging large holders to trade more frequently.

As for relaxation of credit restrictions in the stock market, the financial district—as expressed by Aldrich—regards a cut in margin requirements as a logical reversal of controls on the down turn in prices.

The Federal Reserve Board—holding Washington's strings on the flow of credit to the stock market—boosted margin requirements while stocks were climbing finally taking the amount of money customers must put up with brokers at 55 cents cash out of every dollar of the purchase price of a stock.

Chain Stores

Chain Stores Investment Corp declared a dividend of 5 cents a share on the common stock and regular quarterly dividend of $1.62½ on the $6.50 preferred stock, both payable November 1 to stock of record October 15.

Beneficent Objectives

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S latest Fireside Chat was mainly a discussion of his reasons for calling a special session of Congress.

The President accordingly formulated a program of five economic "objectives" which he desires to have enacted immediately into Federal law.

He wants to stabilize agriculture; to increase the wages and improve the working conditions of "our lowest paid workers"; to conserve natural resources, prevent floods and produce electricity "for more general use"; to reorganize and simplify the complex and overgrown executive branch of the Federal Government; and to restrain monopolies in business.

These are all beneficent objectives. It is doubtful if a single voice will be raised against any of them in Congress.

It remains to be seen, however, whether or not the bills which the special session may be asked to pass will attain the President's objectives, or will operate without injury to the national welfare and with benefit to the groups whom the President wants to benefit.

THIS phase is, of course, the responsibility of Congress, and of Congress alone.

It so happens that bills appertaining to the President's stated objectives were pending in Congress when it adjourned last Summer.

There was not, at that time, any serious criticism of THE OBJECTIVES.

The bills failed of passage because there was insuperable criticism of THE METHODS by which it was sought to attain those objectives.

Thus, the House of Representatives declined to pass the Black-Connery Wages-and-Hours Bill.

Opponents contended that it would have reestablished the defunct NRA in a more drastic and perhaps unworkable form.

With the Department of Agriculture demanding a renascence of the old AAA, no important farm legislation could be obtained except a makeshift cotton subsidy.

Regional planning under the Norris Bill—calling for the creation of seven Federal districts like the TVA—was sidetracked for fear that these districts would become Federal satrapies, dominated from Washington and imposing constraints upon the States.

The Administration measure for departmental reorganization was held up because of its centralization of power in the Executive.

The President, in his Fireside Chat, did not say that the special session would be asked to pass these identical bills.

If such a request is made, the bills may have hard sledding in a Congress that has already received them and turned them down.

APART from all that, the President's Fireside Chat was rather notable for some omissions.

Mr. Roosevelt might have stressed balancing the Federal budget as a means of improving the government and helping the country.

He might have proposed reduction of rapacious taxation, to be accomplished by reduction of extraordinary Federal expenditure.

He might have suggested fewer and less onerous restrictions on honest enterprise, which is the greatest channel of employment and prosperity, and the greatest source of public revenue.

Government could find no better plan of reducing unemployment, and improving the condition of workers everywhere, than that of giving legitimate business the incentives, and likewise leaving it the material means, to hire more men and to pay them increased and increasing wages.

Catholic Book Week

WE are pleased to say a good word for Catholic Book Week, now being observed throughout Greater Boston, with the approval of His Eminence William Cardinal O Connell.

The committee in charge has prepared a list of 1650 books, many of which await readers at the Public Library and its branches. They should be read—widely read.

Each Catholic should resolve now to read at least one book.

At this time when atheistic propaganda receives unwise circulation it is important that religious persons of all creeds and beliefs turn to the better, more worthwhile authors.

Young people especially should interest themselves in Catholic Book Week. Parents ought to encourage them.

One of the greatest tragedies of the age is the bombardment of youthful minds with agnostic trash, which frequently the writers themselves do not believe.

Were Donors Consulted?

THE testimony of Manuel Blanc before the Massachusetts legislative committee investigating subversive organizations, interests financial contributors to the war in Spain.

Twenty-seven hundred dollars, according to Blanc, was collected by Bay State Communists to aid "Loyalists" fighting for the Madrid government.

But only $1400 of that amount was sent to the national headquarters in New York. The remainder was kept in Boston to be expended for office rent, heat and light and the "rehabilitation" of Massachusetts boys who return from the Spanish conflict. So he testified.

It would be interesting to know whether all who contributed to the $2700 were consulted about keeping almost half of the "war relief fund" in Boston.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK Oct. 18. Diary: A gay effort from Gene Fowler on Prague on his way to Deauville to see the former Kaiser a point preferred from the sanguinary Manhattan. Until Mme. Alma Claiborne in Sicily sent an autographed copy of Willa Sibert Cather's newest book. So You Think It's New.

On reading it a new note was struck in Alma Claiborne's life. Here was the critical finger of man function. Instead of the usual flattering adjectives she dotted it. Bernie had every been there. So working then to Cindy Next a party for Lauren Leiding in Paris, and stayed on and on missed the Stork Club's goodbye for Madge Evans of the cinema.

Tuesday with Gene Fowler for a feast of goose. And Bernard Darnton are tossed cowpokings from a Spanish melon plugged with Jamaica rum and lemon might become.

Then settling a moment with Axel and the well-groomed Fifi Widener Whitfield about our dogs.

The end of pantpants in the metropolis is in sight.

An editorialist, commenting thereupon, observes:

"The minute anything becomes picturesque in this country we set about it or do make a museum piece of it."

The pantpants has been in the works for some months. Mayor La Guardia seems to have given it the final deathblow, arguing that modern desire really is that there are the streets more decently legislators have worn of dungaree freedom.

Gradually the metropolis has been modeling itself after the tiptoed open museum of the arts. The pantpants is passing to the way of pushcarts and long beards.

A study in the value of the theater fan's opinion of the A. E. W. Mason play, Ebb Tide. A quiet musician made up in healthy living about three years ago, and after a month of chatting felt he was ready to make his debut. I heard him several times at Music Box parties since. Always everybody was pleased. But he was so terribly self conscious of his hands that he never played in public.

What's the use, After months of rehearsing playing hooches in the Ebb Tide play he would have been subjected to a merciless shaving cream.

Interlude. On a sauntering hot night evening was one of those parties at Peter Arno's. Everybody dressed as early bank scandal contrasting with the ruffians whose pictures Arno has so brilliantly spattered. He was the only one we knew from a big Baptist church. When the Roll is Called Up Yonder.

He was walking from a bag of pumpkin scattered between his shoes and had given a great deal of thought to the psychological fragments of nuts tossed in his mouth when he should give them to the cook. Just before the party with his best north suspenders.

As he munched his eyes roved as a young woman in a corner of her bookcase. She smacked a peasant heart. He was about the highest type of person I've seen since the market crash.

No housemisters seem to be having more fun than Mme. Talbot Hackbusch and Mrs. Jock Whitney. They are seeing all the openings from the downfront pews, tipping the ushers and sending cards and refreshing other explorations to see just exactly what makes Broadway tick.

And few couples turn more heads passing by.

Bagpipelles. Mary Livingstone's real name is Sadie Marx. . . . John D. Rockefeller likes to watch rehearsals at the Center Theater. . . . Frieda Inescourt was once a social secretary to Lady Astor. . . . Richard Watts not only squires his mother to almost every first night, but he bedecks her with orchids.

Max Marx, once a well known Broadway tailor, is in the business again with a Fifth Avenue firm. . . . Elissa Landi is the most versatile linguist in the movie world.

No radio program can get out of a rut more quickly than Amos 'n' Andy. And nobody but a communist can appreciate the daily grind they endure. The funniest story ever heard was Daisy Woon in high topper, going to a dural estate for dinner and being chased all over the English countryside by a turkey.

He finally had to swim a creek to get away from the thing.

Nocturne: Along the bay recent nights have been mottled cloud effects, thinly veiling the moon, creating an enchanting overhead. I am lulled under such a sky—as one is soothed among the cathedral-like poplars in the Rockies.

It may be vain fancying, but somehow there might be a sweet serenity far above our little battles.

Wa wonder?

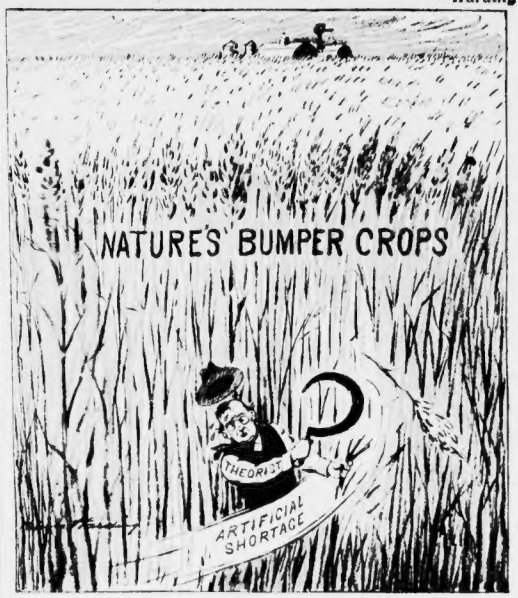
"Little Man, What Now?"

By Nelson Harding



It was the late Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, who said:

"The problem of want amid plenty cannot be solved by abolishing the plenty."

He was discussing the old AAA "policy" whereby farmers were paid for not growing crops and millions of little pigs were "slain."

The artificial shortage thus created was made an acute shortage by drought.

And housewives are now PAYING THE BILLS in the high costs of meats and other foods.

Listen, World!

He's a champion prize-fighter. Yet he likes to do household chores.

Dear Miss Robinson:

Everyone is ready to criticize these useless girls who are brought up with no idea of housekeeping—but it seems to me unpampered sons are just as great a nuisance. Why shouldn't young men learn the rudiments of housekeeping, as well as young women?

When the average wife is ill, her husband is not only unable to care for her, but is utterly unable to look after himself. Yet my women themselves are responsible.

Recently my wife went on a trip. No sooner had she left than all the neighborhood women began inviting me to meals, accompanied by sly and sending clubs and redoubling other exploratations to see just exactly what makes Bagpipelles tick.

And few couples turn more heads passing by.
